THE AMERICAN'S PRIVILEGE

What a wonderful thing it is to be born an American, to feel the privilege of exercising your lungs to their full capacity, to be inhibited only by the blue sky and the rim of the horizon, to know that the precious jewels of life are yours for the seeking. True, you must work and work hard, but you should be happy in work, for it is constructive, broadening, and the only means of fruition.

Nature stands ready and willing to loan you all the tools necessary to complete the hardest task—they're yours for the taking—select the ones you want and use them.

Dig into the mysteries which work alone will uncover. Some of the best and costliest treasures are buried under shallow ground and you might as well uncover your portion. Start in right now and dig—by so doing you will round out a full life—then you can pick up the thread on the other side and carry on gloriously. The tools are here for you to use. Select them and use them!

My suggestion to ambitious young men would be to conserve and develop their physical and mental strength, cram their heads with all the useful knowledge they can, and work, work, work—not simply for their own advancement, but to get worthwhile things done.—Edward G. Seubert.

The difference between getting somewhere and nowhere is the courage to make an early start. The fellow who sits still, and does just what he is told, will never be told to do big things.—Charles M. Schwab.

REVERIE...

And when I look again many years in the future may I recall the happy days of yesteryear.

May each familiar signature bring the memory picture of the original—some great, some famous, some gone from our ken, but all bound close by this token of comradeship.

So be it, and let each classmate of mine who will sign this Roster and strive honorably to complete the character structure, the foundation for which we have here and now begun.
